

Article Submission Guidelines and Terms

Last Updated Sunday, 05 March 2006

Article Guidelines:

Your article should be between 500 and 5000 words long. Exceptions for submissions are considered on an individual basis.

Your title should not contain more than 100 characters.

Your article summary (first paragraph) should be one to five sentences in length.

Your biographical information should not be too lengthy (we recommend two to six sentences).

The body of your article should not contain more than three links, and none of them should be blatantly self-promotional. More links are acceptable if they pertain directly to the article content.

Your author biography box should not contain more than two links.

Your article should be free of grammatical and spelling errors. We reserve the right to make corrections to spelling and grammar, and to adjust styles, type fonts, etc. to fit those on our website(s).

Your article should not read like an ad. Use your author biography -- not the body of your article -- to promote your business or website.

Your article should stand on its own, i.e. it should not require the reader to click on a link to get to the main content.

Avoid too much hype in your author biography. The purpose of the author biography is not to sell your readers something, but to lead them to your website which does the actual selling.
